

FEAR DAUGHTER OF AUTHOR WAS FOUL PLAY VICTIM

Father and Insurance Companies Probing Drowning of Miss Candace Wheeler.

James Cooper Wheeler, author of "There She Blows!" and many other stories of adventure, has asked the police of Denver, Col., to investigate the death of his daughter, Miss Candace Wheeler, who was drowned near there on June 22.

Mr. Wheeler took this step after the officials of the Pennsylvania Mutual and the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Companies had started independent investigations. Miss Wheeler had $12,000 life insurance policies in these companies.

"While we do not say that Miss Wheeler was murdered," Emil Schnecklock of Hollis, L. I., who is the author's legal representative, said last night, "there are circumstances which we regard as most suspicious. The body was not recovered until July 2. Then it was found that all her jewelry was missing, except a necklace, which she clasped in her hands and which had been broken from her neck. It was found that all Miss Wheeler's life insurance was in favor of Dr. I. H. Meyer of Denver. He is a brother of the man she was reported to be engaged to.

"Among her effects also was a will which left her entire property to Otto Meyer, and making his brother, the doctor, sole executor. We judge that outside the life insurance Miss Wheeler left about $10,000 or $12,000. "If Miss Wheeler did not drown after a struggle with some one, it is most strange that all the jewelry she wore should be missing, except the broken necklace, and the way she was clinging to it certainly indicates that she was endeavoring to save it after being attacked by some person who wanted it. "And we have not been able to find any one who admits having seen Miss Wheeler drown."

Beide Meets Sudden Death.
Anna Netace, twenty-six, and her husband, Joseph, lately married, went for a trolley ride yesterday. While on a Greenville car at Danforth and Fowler streets, Jersey City, Mrs. Netace put her head outside the car and was struck by a car of the same line moving in the opposite direction. Her skull was fractured. She died early in the evening in the City Hospital, Jersey City. Her home was at No. 111 Seventh avenue, Newark.

THREATEN TO LYNCH MEN WHO ATTACKED FOUR YOUNG GIRLS

Amityville, L. I., Searchers Likely to Do Violence if They Find Assaultants.

Searching parties armed with axes, bathhooks, guns and ropes are still out today around Amityville, L. I., trying to find two men who attacked four young girls and brutally assaulted one last Saturday night. There is every prospect of a lynching if the men are caught.

Though the countryside has been greatly excited, the authorities managed to keep details of the affair under cover until yesterday. Rewards aggregating $500 have been offered for the arrest and conviction of the men.

The girls are Myrtle Watts, sixteen, of Union avenue; May and Ruth Ketchum, seventeen and sixteen, daughters of Frank Ketchum, and Helen Hirsch of Manhattan, who is visiting her grandfather, Jacob Hartmann. They were on their way to the home of George I. Walters, stepfather of the Watts girl, when a few hundred feet away in Union avenue two men sprang out. One seized Myrtle Watts and drew her into the bushes. The other three girls ran and told Walters, who hurried out and found his stepdaughter's assailant.
